SUPERGUIDE

MIXING RATIO

This is our recommendation for the mixing ratio of the product. The highest mixing ratio is sufficient for normal soiling and is the most economical. The lowest mixing ratio is for stubborn dirt but is still safe to use.

FOAM

This indicates whether the product is low, medium or high foaming.

CUTTING POWER

The cutting power of the polishing product. Low cutting is mainly for removing holograms and fine wax scratches. Medium cutting means the removal of scratches and light oxidation. High cutting means removing deep scratches, orange peel, runners and heavy oxidation. The same applies to polishing pads and microfibre cloths.

CARWASH

The products are suitable for both roller and chain conveyor washing.

SOAKING TIME

The time a product needs to break down the contamination, before you can remove it.

PH

This indicates the pH of the product. See page 6 for more information on pH.

DURABILITY

The average life of the protection provided by the product.

BODY SHOP SAFE

This indicates whether the product has been designed for use in bodyshops.

PH-VALUE

The pH level of a product is a value on a scale between 0 and 14 and indicates whether a product is acidic, neutral or alkaline. A strong acid product has a value of 0 and is used, for example, to remove limescale and metal fall out. pH neutral products have a value of 7 and are safe to use. A strong alkaline product has a pH value of 14. These products are very suitable for the removal of grease, oil and traffic film.

PH VALUE BETWEEN 0 AND 3

A strong acid product has a low pH value between 0 and 3. These products are suitable for removing fly rust and limescale/chalk deposits. These products can also be used to remove the most extreme contamination. However, care should be taken when using strong acidic products. Sensitive parts of a car, such as mouldings and chrome parts can be damaged if used incorrectly. Therefore, always use these products according to the instructions and rinse well with water afterwards. An example of such a product is Acid Clean with a pH value of 1.

Fun facts, in this pH range you will also find stomach acid, lemon juice, cola and vinegar.

PH VALUE BETWEEN 3 AND 6

A slightly acidic product has a pH value between 3 and 6. This is particularly the case for wax-based products such as Splash Shampoo and Royal Shield. The slightly acidic environment ensures that the waxes remain well dissolved in water, improving the stability and durability of this product.

Fun facts, in this pH range you will find orange juice, yogurt, beer and coffee.

PH VALUE BETWEEN 6 AND 8

The neutral products have a pH value between 6 and 8. These are the ordinary mild car shampoos without wax. These products are used for simple surface washing and are very safe to use. Iron Wash is such a special product because, with a pH value of 7, it is neutral and therefore safe, but despite this neutral character, it works very effectively on metal contaminants and fallout.

Fun facts, in this pH range you will find milk, clean water and blood.

PH VALUE BETWEEN 8 AND 11

A slightly alkaline product has a pH value of between 8 and 11. These are cleaning products that on one hand have to work safely, but on the other hand also have to dissolve road dirt or grease well. An example of such a product is Glass Cleaner with a pH value of 9.

Fun facts, in this range you will find soap beans and hand soap.

PH VALUE BETWEEN 11 AND 14

A strong alkaline product has a pH value between 11 and 14. These products can be aggressive but are also very suitable for the removal of oil, grease and traffic dirt. The products work fast and effectively, but in case of improper use, vulnerable parts of the car can be damaged. Therefore, always use these products according to the instructions and rinse well with water afterwards. For example, Wheel Cleaner and Royal Forte fall within this range with a pH value of 13.

Fun facts, in this range you will find chlorine and caustic soda.
